has successfully completed the online Specialization

How to Publish a Journal Article

This Specialization provides a comprehensive guide to the journal publishing process, taking you from your first publication decisions through to increasing the visibility and impact of your published research. Along the way, you'll learn how to select suitable journals, prepare publication-ready manuscripts, work with supplemental materials and research data, navigate submission requirements, respond to reviewer feedback, and share your work responsibly. Whether you are preparing your first journal article or looking to strengthen your publishing knowledge, this Specialization will equip you with practical strategies, publishing best practices, and the confidence to successfully disseminate your research.
